62 (New). A stereolithographic method including a photohardened layer forming step of exposing a photohardenable resin composition layer to light controlled on the basis of stereolithographic data to harden the photohardenable resin composition layer, thereby forming a photohardened layer having predetermined pattern and thickness;

a photohardened layer forming/laminating step for forming a photohardenable resin composition layer on the photohardened layer formed in said photohardened layer forming step, exposing the photohardenable resin composition layer to light controlled on the basis of stereolithographic data to laminate a subsequent photohardened layer on the preceding photohardened layer, and repeating the lamination of a subsequent photohardened layer on a preceding photohardened layer until a desired
